Urshifu Rapid-Strike

A Call To Action

This Pokémon may look familiar to you, but this is no ordinary creature in a children's game. This demon of a Pokémon has terrorized official competitive Pokémon players since its introduction in 2020. It will rob you of your enjoyment of the official competitive format, and the format might die all together! This Pokémon is none other than Urshifu. Urshifu is a Water-Fighting type, already an amazing typing, and it has base stats that make it extremely powerful while also letting it survive multiple hits. This alone wouldn't be too much of a problem, however Urshifu has two forms. The second form is Dark-Fighting, also an excellent offensive and defensive typing. For top players, building teams that can create safe counterplay against both of these forms is impossible, unless you have your own broken Urshifu to spam relentlessly. Urshifu completely flips the delicate balance of competitive team building on its head. But wait, there's MORE!

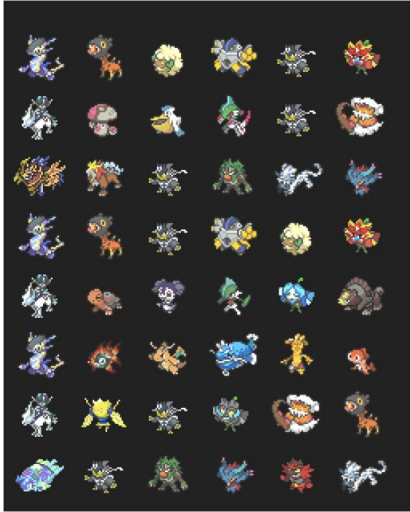

Protect is a move in Pokémon which is very simple. For the turn, the Pokémon using it is immune to all attacks. High level players master the use of protect to create a game based on strategy so that players cannot just use the fastest and strongest pokemon to blast through everything. However, Urshifu has the ability Unseen Fist, which allows it to completely bypass the move. This move has one restriction, which is that it only works when Urshifu uses a move that makes contact. Unfortunately for game balance, quite literally every single relevant move Urshifu learns (besides protect itself) is a contact move, making the already small restriction useless. This basically bypasses the one restriction that should be universal to all Pokémon.

Urshifu's Base Stats

These are Urshifu's base stats, and they don't look too insane to the naked eye. However, that high attack stat is able to rip through everything in its path! There is an ability that can lower Urshifu's physical attack stat by one, intimidate, so problem solved, right? NO. Urshifu's signature move BYPASSES ALL ATTACK DROPS. Top players have been clamoring to BAN URSHIFU because there is no way around this constriction. It feels like the only way to beat Urshifu is with your own Urshifu, and people are sick of it.

Wolfe Glick (also known as WolfeyVGC) winner of the 2016 Pokémon World Championships, has said that "the strategies we have to counter [Urshifu] now, are a little bit limited." He says to this day that it is an abhorrent Pokémon, and the pixels on the screen should be ashamed of themselves for creating such an unbalanced Pokémon. Not only is it unbalanced, it has been pointed out by many people that it is very skillless to use it.

Top 8 Teams at Worlds 2024

Do you notice something a bit fishy about these 2024 Top Team results? 6 out of 8 teams have Urshifu, with the Urshifus in the top two players' teams having the same moveset and held item. (shown below)

Moreover, more than half of the teams at the World Championship use Urshifu. In fact, it is so popular that the World Championships had solely decoration of Urshifu.

Worlds 2024

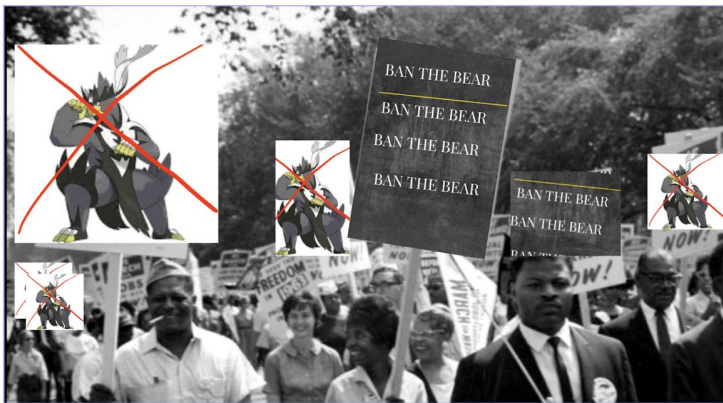

Catching On

People are catching on to this injustice, however. An entire quarter of the USA is protesting in the streets, totalling to 126.5 million. These righteous individuals have stood ground against this awful bear tragedy. The areas where the individuals who have awoken to this injustice live is mapped by the government census below.

The map from the census

There have been many organized protests throughout the world. This is one of our recent protests against Urshifu in Washington D. C., led by Wolfe Glick, Junichi Masuda, and Martin Luther King Jr.

No matter how much we are in the thick of it with this deplorable denizen of the Ursidae family, we must resume living our normal lives. It cannot strike us down, we will surge back. Even with its wickedness, we will still survive. We shall prevail over this audacious, autocratic force invading every country on earth.

- Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Luther King Jr. gave a speech at this rally, a beautiful speech about the debasement Urshifu is the catalyst of in the competitive metagame.

Ed Sheeran (definitely surely trust me bro)

Ed Sheeran later showed up to the rally, and told everyone that if they donated $75 to the glorious cause, he would give them a signed copy of the record of the song "Celestial", which he originally made for the Pokémon company. Junichi Masuda, one of the creators of Pokémon at its youth, has had enough with the terror of Shigeru Miyamoto, the main head of Nintendo. "His tyranny and desire for stats that looked like they were balanced by a two year old has led us to this era. Unfortunately, I have no access to the code, and he has paid the programmers off. He is greedy, and he knows that because Urshifu is locked behind a paywall, if it is very good competitively, it will get Nintendo more money to make more obscenely powerful Pokémon that are locked behind even more paywalls."

Valiant, noble efforts like those of Masuda, Sheeran, Glick, and King have taken the community by storm, with many people realizing how they have made many mistakes by supporting the addition of Urshifu in the past. They have changed their ways, and have taken the moral high ground by visiting !!!OUR SHOP!!! to donate money to support the protests. On this page, you can find incredible, stylish t-shirts that were made with the finest linen from Sierra Leone. You can also find hardcore Urshifu repellent, which is made from specific tree-like, gourmet odors from the Balkan Sea. The money from the sales from both of these products is used to donate to a petition to ban the vile vermin.

A multitude of youtubers, streamers, and other niche internet celebrities have also dedicated many years to dethroning Urshifu. These creators include the aforementioned Wolfe Glick (@WolfeyVGC on youtube), Kai Cenat, MrBeast, and others, who have created many eye-opening videos on the subject.

Ash Colby is an expert at Pokémon, winning many tournaments, including the Latin American International Championship. He started playing in 2018, and has dominated online tournament play ever since. In fact, he is so amazing, that everyone loves him, and he, along with Wolfe Glick (but mainly Ash) are the most respected players in the competitive scene. When Urshifu was released, he made a vow to never use it, but he couldn't keep that vow and still maintain his status as a top player. He was inevitably forced to use Urshifu, but he has still been one of the strongest advocates for its ban, speaking out against his own oppression. His beautiful, handsome self made a video explaining the causes of banthebear.com - quite expertly, I might add - that has BLOWN UP over the internet. You can watch it below. Don't take my word for it! Take it from him!
